Colonial Beach Defended Religious Other Items.

(Correspondence of THE FREE LANCE.)

Colonial Beach, March 2nd, 1901.

Nothing seems to stimulate correspondence to mention this town unless it is to chronicle something detrimental to the people. I have often wondered why some of our townsmen did not exercise their pens against such injustices, and finally concluded it was not too late to throw myself in the breach, and rectify as far as possible the errors of the past.

Many of the phony law-abiding citizens of the adjacent counties who would scorn to break the commandment in which we are told, "Not to bear false witness against our neighbors," will gladly listen to and repeat with evident satisfaction the disgracefully exaggerated occurrences in this little town. There are good and bad in every village, and I frankly admit that we have our full share of the bad, but notwithstanding that fact Colonial Beach is not nearly so black as it is painted.

The sunny face of our efficient post mistress is to be seen at her post of duty waiting on all with a cheerfulness and unfailing courtesy which is even proof against the most irritating of all things, an "east wind."

Those who are interested in church work here have reason to be encouraged by the interest displayed in the Sabbath schools. Union Chapel, though undenominational, shows a roll of forty members who assemble in the forenoon. In the afternoon a school of sixty are convened in the Baptist church, where the Rev. Mr. Thomas has added his able efforts in making it a success. We deeply regret the departure of Rev. Mr. Thomas from our midst. He is a zealous earnest Christian and a good conscientious pastor. While changing his residence he will still hold these appointments a month here.

The fine weather of late made the young people gaze lovingly at their croquet grounds in anticipation of the pleasant evenings in store for their club. The oyster traffic has been very dull here this season.

A Good Cough Medicine for Children.

"I have no hesitancy in recommending Chamberlain's Cough Remedy," says E. P. Moran, a well known and popular banker, of Petersburg, Va. "We have given it to our children when troubled with bad coughs, and it has always given perfect satisfaction. It was recommended to me by a druggist as the best cough medicine for children as it contained no opium or other harmful drug." Sold by M. M. Lewis.

A clever swindler has fleeced a large number of people in some sections of the State by pretending to be an agent for a well known fashion magazine published in Philadelphia. His victims are women, and he represents himself as being sent out by the publishing company's local agents to solicit orders. By offering attractive inducements, he has filled hundreds of orders, forged the local firm's name to receipts, and decamped with the money.

A remarkable story of male impersonation was revealed in a London police court, in connection with an arrest for alleged money frauds. The prisoner, named Catherine Cooke, aged sixty-six years, described as a house decorator, appeared in the dock in male attire. For forty years Catherine impersonated a man, and worked on board peninsula and Oriental steamers in various capacities, and also for London firms. She says she was married at fifteen, taught school, and then thought there were better chances of advancement as a man.

Mrs. C. E. Van Dusen, of Kilburn, Wis., was afflicted with stomach trouble and constipation for a long time. She says, "I have tried many preparations but none have done me the good that Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets have." These Tablets are for sale at M. M. Lewis's drug store.

THE CONSTITUTIONAL CONVENTION

The Subject Ably Discussed by Judge A. H. on.

King George C. H. Va., March 4, 1901.

TO THE FREE LANCE:

Notwithstanding the Richmond Times taking a much greater interest in the Convention than in any man who may be aspiring to the Governorship, too much was said about it in the Norfolk Convention and far more too much by the Legislature in extra session just adjourned—unless what was said had been more to the point, and thus given the people, who are to be the creators of that Convention, more enlightenment upon the most vital and important questions which have come before them for their consideration since the dark days of reconstruction.

The writer was a member of the Norfolk Convention and that body implicitly, at least, pledged the Democratic party to a submission of the Constitution as framed to the people for ratification or rejection. It is now urged by many newspapers and lay-writers that that Convention could not bind the Constitutional Convention, which will be clothed with absolute powers.

I admit the naked legal proposition, but I deny both the logical and moral right of the Constitutional Convention, if composed of a majority of Democrats—as no doubt it will be—to go behind that declaration to which the Democratic party—those representatives were fresh from the people—was then and there committed.

The power of the Constitutional Convention to frame a Constitution and declare it to be the fundamental law of the State without submission to the people, I will not dispute.

In an able article by Mr. J. M. Johnson, of Alexandria, a lawyer learned in Constitutional law, recently published in the Alexandria Gazette, Art. XII of our present Constitution is discussed, and he reaches the conclusion, which I neither affirm nor deny, that it is the implied duty of the Constitutional Convention to submit its work to the vote of the people. Whether right or wrong in his Constitutional views, my opinion is the Democratic party stands pledged to a submission.

I don't believe a motion to call a Constitutional Convention could have been carried at Norfolk without an implied promise of submission of the Constitution to the people.

It is well known that the people still have this question under their control by requiring the necessary pledges of their delegates.

After the Norfolk Convention the Legislature, pursuant to Sec. 2, Art. XII of the Constitution, submitted to the people the question: "Shall there be a Convention to revise the Constitution and amend the same?" The people of the State at the polls replied in the affirmative.

Then the same Legislature was called in extra session to "provide by law for the election of delegates to such Convention"—Sec. 2, Art. XII, Constitution of Virginia—and for this only.

Instead of adhering strictly to their Constitutional duty, many members—some of whom are mentioned now as possible delegates to the Convention—endeavored first, to restrict the right to vote for delegates; second, to dictate who should be eligible as members; third, to prohibit the Convention from submitting its action to a vote of the people; fourth, to say who should vote upon the adoption or rejection of the Constitution if it was submitted. The movers and advocates of these several propositions seemed to forget we had any Constitution now at all, and believe the Legislature to be supreme.

They seemed to forget that they were the creatures of our present Constitution, to which every one of the foregoing propositions is obnoxious.

It is not necessary here to discuss these Constitutional questions further than to say that until a new Constitution is framed and adopted, we live under the present, and our Legislature, which is its creature, is as much bound by it as the humblest citizen, however potent and august it may conceive itself to be.

Senator McWhorter, of Petersburg, voiced the views of every Constitutional lawyer in Virginia when he said the Constitution was in a state of inchoate, and until adopted we are all bound by the provisions of the present one. This seemed fortunately to put a quietus upon the would-be-Constitution makers before they got upon the floor of the Constitutional Convention. If when they get there they evince no more knowledge of Constitutional law than they did in the Legislative halls, and succeed in carrying out their views, I think it would have been better for the people of Virginia to "bear the ills they have than fly to those they know not of." As a loyal Virginian I believe in obedience to her Constitution as "it is writ" until we get a better one.

The Convention has been called to better the condition of the people.

First, to relieve them as far as possible from onerous taxation by reduction of both State and county expenses.

Secondly, to consider the question of frage.

Thirdly, To consider the question of public, or, as better understood, free education, in which is involved the application of the public school funds between the white and black population—and many others.

These are grave questions—not to be lightly considered—for the result must

For years, and the people will have to suffer all the ills of the Convention's mistakes.

If patriotic citizens shall compose the Convention, its work will redound to the honor and welfare of our beloved Virginia, and be worthy of her proud history and traditions. And this work ought to be done in the patriotic spirit of the 5th, 8th and 17th paragraphs of our Bill of Rights.

If not, my prayer is "God save the Commonwealth." If the press would pay more attention to the vital questions of reform in our present Constitution and less to candidates for office "the consummation so devoutly to be wished" would be reached. Let the press speak for the people and the candidates for themselves.

If this is done the people will know beforehand what is proposed to be done by the Convention, and they will send men to it who will carry out their will.

I have written far too much for your space, I fear, but will continue to set forth my views upon the important questions herein before stated if you will be kind enough to print them. I notice that no one to this date has done so, and all seem to be unwilling.

A man without convictions is unfit to represent our people in the Convention. A man with convictions, who is too cowardly to express them, is equally so. The ignorant and the coward should both be ignored by the people.

To those who so flatteringly called upon me to become a candidate for a seat in the Convention, I beg to say that no man whom the people want to fill that exalted and responsible position has a right to decline it. I am ready to accept the will of the voters of King George and Stafford voluntarily expressed.
